

Elegant detail

Harris House Kitchens knows attention to detail helps create the right balance

TRADITIONAL INCLUSIONS SUCH AS CORBELS, FLUTING AND BEADING ADD TEXTURE AND DEPTH TO A CLASSIC SPACE.

From the moment she began work on this kitchen, designer Linda Harris knew it was going to be special. The clients' clear vision and keen eyes for detail had given Linda the perfect starting point to create a design that would fulfil all the owners' needs.

In particular, the owners really wanted to create something beautiful, so Linda chose a handpainted Dance Door from the exclusive Harris House range. Handcrafted pieces such as the scrolled corbels on the mantel and either side of the refrigerator give the kitchen a classic, timeless appeal. Handcrafted fluting and beading were also added to specific panels and columns to enhance the visual effect.

It was very important this kitchen be far more than simply beautiful. Storage space has not been forgotten with a selection of fittings from Blum and Häfele used for both pullout units and in the pantry. The island bench features a gorgeous jarrah benchtop with 65mm Regal edge, which adds much to the rich beauty of this room.

"The main considerations were attention to detail and to create the right balance with the aesthetics," says Linda. For that reason, Linda has cleverly incorporated the dressing of the pantry door and wall to integrate the cabinetry and continue the flow of the detailing.

With a wealth of bench space and plenty of room in which to move, the kitchen is perfect for entertaining — whether for a party or an intimate dinner. Careful placement of drawers and cupboards ensures all regularly used items are close to hand and clutter can be kept to a minimum.

The collaboration between client and designer on this project can rightfully be classed as a labour of love with both parties highly satisfied with the end result.
